For the 36th G8 Summit (2010), this UW venue was renamed the Waterloo Summit Centre for the Environment – currently a research, teaching and community centre. The Nedlaw Living Wall Biofilter designed and installed for the Summit is now a permanent centerpiece.

In addition to removing harmful VOCs, this living wall biofilter has added real value as an educational tool and a demonstration of environmental initiatives.